The Magazine

The engagement and longevity of our print magazine make it one of our most inherently valuable and influential products. Established in 1972 as “The Skier’s Magazine,” Powder is committed to entertaining and informing, through honest and careful storytelling, a community of loyal and passionate readers dedicated to a life lived among mountains. These readers demand the printed word, spending an average of two hours reading each issue with an average subscription tenure of over 11 years. Many subscribers hold on to every issue.

1970s 1980s 1990s 2000s 2010s Present
In order to leave a lasting impression, the final issue of the season always includes some of our best work, as it lives on newsstands for the longest period of time and wraps the year up by looking ahead to what is next.

The readers might stay for the words, but they come for the photos. Just in time for the holidays is one of our best-selling issues, the always captivating Photo Annual. The best ski photographers in the world come to Powder. Curated by 25-year-veteran and legendary director of photography David Reddick, the Photo Annual includes a 30-page feature of the most insane ski images you have ever seen.

The December issue seems to always pack a punch. The cover always mesmerizes and the features therein leave a lasting impression. The issue makes for the perfect stocking stuffer, as it includes our annual accessories guide.

Now that the pump is primed, we go deeper. Before we do, before those storms start to hit, we’re going to need the right jackets and pants to stay warm and dry while pursuing the best days of our lives. In the October issue, we introduce the best new outerwear for the season based on the feedback of our trusted correspondents and edit staff at our annual Thread the Needle event.

Every winter, around this time of year, skiers wonder where they should go next. Nothing beats exploring a new place with skis, and the November issue includes our resort, heli, and cat ski guide to pave the way for our readers’ next dream trip.

In order to leave a lasting impression, the final issue of the season always includes some of our best work, as it lives on newsstands for the longest period of time and wraps the year up by looking ahead to what is next.

Digital
Digital Publishing original stories daily that are essential and relevant to skiers, Powder.com continues to stand apart as an award-winning leader in digital ski media. It is the digital hub for all of our media channels, including original timely content, magazine subscriptions, video, podcasts, travel, features, and gear.
With a growing audience that is the largest collective social community within skiing, Powder uses Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Snapchat, and more to direct skiers to our award-winning content in both print and digital mediums. Our social channels having created an engaged community of skiers while leading the real-time conversation about what is relevant to our readers.
Franchise Content Sponsorships

Our partners know we have the best readers in skiing, and in addition to buying advertisements in our magazine and on our website, they also want to share their own stories and images with you. We publish sponsored content from the people and brands we trust and believe have a message that is in line with ours. Sponsored Content is produced by the advertiser and given to Powder only to host and publicize through paid socials. All sponsored content is clearly labeled and distinguished as separate from editorial.

GEAR LOCKER

Everybody loves gear. Time again, this proves true with Gear Locker, our most popular and consistent department on Powder.com. As ski equipment becomes lighter and more technical, readers want to stay up-to-date on the best new gear, and specifically the gear Powder endorses with our Skier’s Choice badge of approval.

Digital Features

Each season Powder selects several unique longform stories to be presented in a multimedia feature. The strength of simple words and images is complemented by animation and video to provide an experience found nowhere else. These custom stories presented in a wide-screen format to allow readers the space to savor the content and immerse themselves in the layers of creative design.

Since publishing our first digital feature in 2013, Powder has quickly gained recognition as a market leader in multimedia execution. With a long list of industry awards and consumer popularity, we're dedicated to continuing the growth of our portfolio of digital features and showcasing the best in journalism this season.

Channels

Powder Productions features the following video channels on Powder.com:

Cool World
Shining is Silly
A fresh new perspective seeking to poke fun at skiing in general, the industry, and, most importantly, ourselves. This satirical video channel features lighthearted series and episodes to bring much needed humor throughout the season to keep it light.

Examples:
- Vile Pile
- Fuzzy Days

All Time
The Days of Our Lives
Created with a simple goal, to showcase episodic content that gets skiers fired up to ski, in almost real time. This series focuses on translating the feeling of being on the hill with one to two minute action edits, featuring a deep powder day, a technical backcountry descent, or a sunny day in the terrain park.

Examples:
- Alta, UT
- Sugarloaf, ME
- Jackson, WY

Passing Through
Local Guides for Your Next Ski Trip
The goal of this series is to capture the culture of ski destinations across the globe and uncover what makes them unique—from the locals, to the terrain and the community. This service-based, travel-oriented series focuses on the essentials any skier needs to know before spending a weekend at a particular ski area/resort and offers a real, authentic lens of destinations for skiers looking to check off their wish list this winter.

Examples:
- Whitefish
- Snowbird
- Whistler
- Crested Butte
Sponsored Content

As part of the transition to a full-service studio, Powder Productions now offers brands the opportunity to produce and distribute custom content. Utilizing our portfolio of assets, clients have full access to our team of editors, filmers, artists, and producers to help create and execute premium content. Additionally, these services include a comprehensive distribution plan throughout Powder’s platform to achieve engagement goals.

Iconic Lifts presented by Strafe: This four-part video series brings the narrative of influential ski lifts (chairs, gondolas, trams) that have shaped our experiences as skiers and the resorts, terrain and landscape in which they reside. After a successful launch last season, the series returns for a second, featuring new locations and natural storyline evolution.

Branded Content

For brands looking to create custom content and simply don’t have the internal resources, Powder Productions offers expert content, production, and marketing services to bring any video idea to fruition.

In fall 2017, Visit Montana partnered with TEN, enlisting the services of Powder Productions to produce an episodic series, called The Montana Way. Featuring Big Sky, Bozeman, and Bridger Bowl, the series seeks to inform and inspire the avid skier to book a trip to Montana, in a similar tone and them as the Passing Through editorial franchise.

A robust social media execution—including Instagram Stories—coincided with the launch of the series.

Montana Is The Place to Be Right Now
Powder-starved Marcus Caston finds what he’s looking for in Big Sky
January 11, 2018 | By Powder Magazine

This sponsored content is paid for by Visit Montana.

Every time the powder falls, any skier knows it’s time to drop everything and head to the mountain. For pro skier Marcus Caston, an early-season dump in Montana spurred the Salt Lake City resident to head out to a spot that he’d never been to before and see what Montana’s mountains have to offer.

“They got 18 inches last night at Big Sky,” says Caston. “I’m really excited to ski some new spots.”

After turning off the main road into Big Sky, Caston gets his first glimpse of Lone Peak.
Film Partnership

Following the success of featured projects like Monumental: Skiing Our National Parks (REI) and The Great Siberian Traverse (The North Face), in winter 2018, Powder Productions premiered Lineage: A Journey With Ingrid Backstrom and Family, with support from Giro, evo, Volkl, and HiBall Energy.

The short film premiered mid-winter after the rush of the fall ski movie release for free on Powder’s Facebook and Powder.com.

The project included a downhome, six-stop tour throughout the Pacific Northwest, including two spots at the Portland and Seattle evo stores. Additionally, the film premiered at the Denver evo store during the OR/SIA Snowshoe. In conjunction with the film, the project also included a digital feature written by Ingrid Backstrom and a social media campaign—Facebook and Instagram—with the Top 10 Best Ski Runs in North America, according to Ingrid Backstrom.

POWDER AWARDS & READER POLL

Founded in 2001, the Powder Awards have become the most distinguished event of the year, showcasing the evolution and progression of skiing through the lens of the sport’s best photographers, cinematographers, and athletes. Recognized by the ski industry as the only awards show of the season, the event enters its second decade of acknowledging those that continue to push the limits through athleticism and artistry.

For its 17th anniversary, the Awards returned to the mountains of Colorado to a sold-out capacity of over 1,000 at Breckenridge’s Riverwalk Center, including some of the most recognized and talented athletes and filmmakers in the sport. Coinciding with the revamped Dew Tour, the Awards kicked off the weekend-long festival that continues to be the standard for award shows.

POWDER WEEK

For the past 17 years, Powder has dedicated a week in February to hosting the ski industry. What started as a simple gathering has evolved into an unofficial tradeshow with over 35 brands represented each season to showcase their best hardgood products for the next season. Paired with an editor each day to put the product through the paces, this week serves as the foundation of identifying the best skis, boots, and bindings of the year for our annual Buyer’s Guide in the September issue.

Traditionally a private event exclusive to manufacturers, this season Powder Week will evolve to include industry influencers, retailers, and consumers.

#PowderWeek

THREAD THE NEEDLE

Six years ago, Thread the Needle was created to bring together Powder editors and a collective of skiers with the most recognized apparel manufacturers for a first look at the latest in technology, style, and design. Hosted in Solitude, Utah, the week-long event puts the apparel through the ringer—up the bootback, down hill at top speeds, and at the bar for apres. The resulting feedback helps the editors to determine the best products on the market and serves at the foundation of our annual Apparel Guide, found in the October issue.

#SkiingIsFancy
Movie Tours

Powder Movie Tour

Launching in mid-October, this year’s tour features the best films from Powder Productions, our in-house studio, as well as partnership-based projects. Last season, Powder premiered Lineage: A Journey With Ingrid Backstrom and Family, with support from Giro, evo, Volkl, and HiBall Energy. Premieres include a full Q&A session with Powder editors, filmmakers, and athletes providing an intimate experience to explore behind-the-scenes conversations beyond the film.

The short film premiered mid-winter after the rush of the fall ski movie release for free on Powder’s Facebook and Powder.com.

The project included a downhome, six-stop tour throughout the Pacific Northwest, including two spots at the Portland and Seattle evo stores. Additionally, the film premiered at the Denver evo store during the OR/SIA Snowshow. In conjunction with the film, the project also included a digital feature written by Ingrid Backstrom and a social media campaign—Facebook and Instagram—with the Top 10 Best Ski Runs in North America, according to Ingrid Backstrom.

This season we’ll be once again hitting the road from Seattle to Denver to Burlington and locations in between to present our latest projects to celebrate the culture and sport of sliding downhill.
Powder Radio

New this past season, Powder Radio hit the airwaves with the introduction of three podcasts to complete our multimedia platform. With an audience reach spanning across ten countries and more than 130,000 unique listeners, ages 25-34, this medium continues to grow reach and deliver Powder to a new audience.

SPONSORED: THE STORIES BEHIND THE SKIERS

A weekly show hosted by industry veteran Mike Powell, Sponsored is a unique mix of Behind the Music meets Where Are They Now, featuring the most recognized skiers in the world. This in-depth, thought-provoking podcast celebrates skiing through the lens of those responsible for evolving our sport.

THE STORYTELLERS

This bi-weekly series delivers a behind-the-scenes look at the magazine’s best stories. Interviews with editors, writers, and photographers give listeners a unique look at what it takes to tell the stories in the “The Skier’s Magazine.”
Testimonials

“Powder Magazine specifically represents the demographic of people that are the core skiers and are therefore the core Flylow user. By teaming with Powder Magazine we are able to connect with our primary base and then expand beyond to the more casual skier and pure backcountry skier. In the end we all want to have fun and get outside, for better or worse, we would rather be immersed in powder while outside and we want to help everyone else see the light. This magazine helps us do that.” Dan Abrams, Flylow Gear

“Powder Magazine is an indispensable partner to reach an important audience in our demographic, attracting key consumers with quality content and unbiased gear advice. Kevin and the team at Powder always provide more value than promised, and make the process to work with them very easy.” Brady Barry, Helly Hansen

“Powder has been a mainstay in the Arc’teryx media mix for over 15 years. There’s been a lot of disruption in the media world over that time but great storytelling for skiers remains just as important today regardless of the platform skiers are experiencing those stories on.

 Powder has stayed relevant across all its touch-points by understanding how to bring those great stories to life and by being authentic to the culture of the sport. What kind of insane person doesn’t like powder skiing?” Adam Ketcheson, ARC’TERYX
